

How “current” must classroom-based assessments and observations be for reviewing the existing evaluation data?

This information should be the most recent available (the current or previous school year). Although there may be variances, information that is more than one year old may not be useful.

The IEP Team and other qualified professionals should review classroom-based assessments and observations to determine if the information is current and sufficient.